Faith, Basis of Prophecy

The tendency to judge others unfairly is not a new phenomenon. As we see in today's Gospel, Jesus' hometown friends and neighbors were sure they knew him. They had him pegged as the carpenter's son, and they became offended when he startled them and proved their assessment of him to be lacking.... As a result of their closed-mindedness, Jesus "was not able to perform any mighty deed" for his hometown folks.... Even [Jesus] cannot work in us without our acquiescence to him in faith. Jesus freely offers his wisdom and his mighty deeds, but human beings are free to respond, or not.... Last week's Gospels showed the importance of faith as a requisite for the working of miracles: the cures of the hemorrhaging woman and Jairus' daughter.... Jesus' cures and mighty deeds were to be understood as a response to faith.

Rejection would follow Jesus to the end, as it had the prophets before him. Rejection followed his disciples [and all] those who bring God's challenging word now as well. Human beings have an innate capacity for setting aside messages and messengers who bring uncomfortable news, especially if they think they "know" the messenger.... Fortunately, the Spirit who brings God's message also lives in us.... We rely on Christ's Spirit to open our hearts and ears to anyone who brings God's message to our lives today.
