REFLECTION

TODAY

Then he began to say to them, "Today this scripture has been fulfilled in your hearing." (Luke 4:21)

Yes, you can look back at all the clouded midnights and the miserable poor who overflow the urban cups of containment and the blind and lame and deaf who bump and toddle along next to all the eyes and legs and ears never scarred and sob for past imprisonments that cannot be redeemed

Yes, you can look ahead to the dreamy day when all is well and all shall be well and the present-day hipster cynic will be crushed by joy and released from dire irony and then sit there and grieve the time gorge between then and this sorry now and fall into the groove of post-everything sarcasm

Or, you can look into now and see the glory hidden in the cracks and fissures of reality a paucity of light, yes, but still seeping through glory in the poor who manufacture joy from nothing glory in the blind who make their way just fine thank you glory in the deaf who make tacit words you wish you could hear glory in the locked up who discover inner sovereignty glory in the one word spoken you've never wagered on today is the day and liberation is now and not even your ferocious doubt or lingering melancholia can disable it but your surrender to its unmitigated truth collapses all of time into this eternal munificent is
