A Covenant Beyond Mere Regulations

Lent is our time to work out the narrative of our own call to discipleship.... "The original followers of Jesus imitated him long before they worshiped him." (Fr Ed Hays) The first disciples didn't drastically change their life-styles and follow him ... because they believed [at first] he was God, but because they saw the value in imitating the way he thought and lived. He not only focused on things and people they had never before noticed, he also showed them how to change the world in which they lived. And he did this, not by creating a new religion, but by showing them how to integrate his unique insights into the faith they already professed. That's why it is essential for us to understand the importance of covenants in Jesus' faith.... [Throughout the New Testament,] we're told that Jesus has taken his covenant with Yahweh beyond just the regulations [of Jewish law.]. His faith in God, demonstrated in his commitment to others, eventually led him to experience God working effectively in the people and situations which filled his everyday life... sharing his experience of God's kingdom among us.

Since Abraham and Sarah – the first Jews – have yet to make an appearance, [the covenant with Noah described in today's first reading] is with all people and all creation... Just as Noah and his family were saved through the waters of the flood, so the followers of Jesus are saved through the waters of baptism. It's through baptism that we formally make a commitment to share in the "righteousness" of Jesus, make his frame of mind our frame of mind and make his faith our faith.

This form may adversely affect the work of some faith-based organizations.
