Did You Dream Tonight

“And in the spirit he carried me away to a great, high mountain and showed me the holy city Jerusalem...” – Revelation 21

Did you dream tonight and if you did was it good, was it holy was it light and love in one coloured vision did the woven blanket wrap around you like your spellbound embrace in electric REM cycle or did you dream of earthquakes and bombs heartache and disease and abandonment a boy in the dry dirt thinner than straw a girl alone on a honking city street island a falling without flying that never ends

Did you feed your voracious mind with blackness and gunshot and the worst of yourself projected on screens all the obvious waste of human living like Tater Tots tossed in the mouth without tasting beyond salt and fat without nourishing any part of your hungry self

Or did you suckle on the milk of the soul the new Jerusalem coming down a miasma and lifting to unveil the community and canon song and humble look in another's eye that says we are in this together to stumble along until we watch each other die and our grandchildren bury us and remember us with gentle yearning that we loved and we dreamed of love and the reveries we had in the long nights of unknowing were good and were always drawing us on toward the dream of God into which we shall all awake
