Bringing Evangelization Down To Earth

In today's First Reading, the Prophet Isaiah wants people to imagine how God's loving power can satisfy all human hungers. Jesus brings that invitation down to earth as he sends the 72 evangelists out to proclaim the reign of God. The mission involves the entire world; 72 was the number of nations commonly known at the time. Rather than fantasize about a simplistic harmony, he lays it out for them with the stark realism of a prophet: I am sending you out, as lambs among wolves, to teach: "The Kingdom of God is at hand." There was no catechism. Teach by curing the sick and sharing your peace. If people rejected that message, there was to be no argument; they would dust off their shoes and move on. Jesus' style of evangelization is a ministry of presence; the way his missionaries are with others is their first and strongest proclamation of the Kingdom of God. They do good. Eventually, after people have been hooked by the joy of their way of life, they invite them to be followers of Jesus.

At a time when the Romanian Church was illegal, celebrating the liturgy could get you arrested; communities of monks and nuns operating underground risked prison. A woman was working in a factory where some other young women workers attracted her attention by some intangible quality of their presence. As she got to know them and asked what made them different, they admitted they were believers. They invited her to pray with them at their apartment. Time went on and trust grew. They eventually invited her to join their secret religious congregation. Being lambs among wolves, they had learned to evangelize by presence and only much later by formal invitations to discipleship.

People who evangelize by their presence are recognizable first by their freedom. They can hang out with anyone. They notice needs and respond to them with whatever power they have. They are utterly unimpressed by power, prestige, and glitter. They live in today, knowing that tomorrow is beyond their control and that the future holds invincible promise. They understand that concern for their own hide ties them down. They've learned to imagine a world where everyone can flourish because that is what starts happening wherever they show up.

When the 72 returned, Jesus spoke of the results of their work: "I have observed Satan fall like lightning from the sky." This declaration assures us there is no adversary equal to the grace of Christ. When the church genuinely proclaims the reign of God, nothing can overcome it.
